

Codale Electric Supply Hard Hatless Tour and Lunch

At 225,000 square feet, Codale Electric Supply's new Salt Lake City headquarters facility is the largest of any independent electrical distributor in the nation. Spanning a 13-acre lot, the massive 210,000-square foot main building features 59,000 square feet of office space and a 151,000-square foot distribution warehouse. In addition to the main building, the company built a 15,000-square foot facility for the assembly and modification of power substations, part of their fast-growing Codale Modification and Assembly Division (CMAD).

Construction systems include an all-steel column/beam structure and walls, with a joist and deck roof structure. The roof system is a single ply membrane, EPDM. The warehouse is comprised of columns at a minimum of 40' bay spacing, with a clearspan of 28'. Exterior finishes include a combination of painted concrete tilt panel and Texcote, with a curtain wall system in the front entrance area, along with EIFS (Terra Neo) accented trims.

The entire building is a showcase of the products Codale carries, as well as the most advanced technologies available in the electrical, lighting, datacom, utility, and energy services industries. More than 300 different lighting fixtures were installed in the building—every room and office features a different combination of fixtures and lighting controls, which are identified (along with data on average foot-candles and watts-per-square-foot) as part of the building's interior signage. Other unique finishes were employed for instructional effect, including a wall just off the main lobby, which features a variety of typical "exterior" finishes, from fine to course (i.e. brick to stucco), to demonstrate lighting effects.
